jobs of perhaps 50 local people, a spokesman for the company said.

The defense giant announced July 18 that it was

The layoffs constitute about 10 percent of the company's local workforce. There are 524 persons in the Quad City area who work at the company. McDonnell spokesman Barbara Anderson said the majority of the layoffs would come among the company's salaried, non-union employees — mostly 'technical, clerical and managerial positions."

The policy states that school purposes include "all interscholastic or extracurricular athletic, academic or other events sponsored by the School Board or in which students of the district participate."

Previously, cigarette smoking was permitted in several designated areas on school grounds and prohibitions were not enforced during some school-organized activities.

Although the new policy allows employ-ees to smoke in a single designated area in a school building, it requires that an equivalent area be provided for employ-ees where smoking is not permitted.

The appeal for "summer life-savers" is being made to the general public.

"During summer months, the blood supply traditionally is lower due to increased travel over the highways, leading to an increase in traffic accidents, and also due to people waiting to have elective surgery during their summer vacation," said Ron Streiler, Tri-City Chapter manager.

"With more people on vaca-tion, blood donations usually decrease because most people don't consider donating before they go or while on vacation."

The bill seeks $200 million for federal aid programs, including job retraining and economic development, which are monitored by the states.

tored by the states.

Jobless defense workers would also receive unemployment benefits for 52 weeks, instead of the usual 26, and would receive one year of health insurance coverage for themselves and their families

The bill would also expand small business assistance programs, offering incentives such as export credits and loans for businesses converting from defense to civilian enterprises.

Gephardt said the federal gov-ernment will rely largely on communities to help in conver-sion efforts. He cited a program now in place at St. Louis Com-munity College, where former McDonnell Douglas employees are taking retraining classes.

"We need to get the money out there to the college and uni-versity systems so (laid-off workers) could have that option," he said.

The laser industry is one area where skilled McDonnell Douglas employees could use their talents to secure new jobs, Gephardt said.

The House is expected to take up the bill this week.

Medicare suggests, however, that you submit claims as you get your bills. It will be easier for you to keep track of your claims that way.

Q. I'll be turning age 70 this year. I was told by my employer that I can now work all I want and still get my Social Security. Is this true?

A. Once you turn 70 you'll be able to draw all of your Social security no matter how much you're earning.
While you're still under age 70 you have to be retired by Social Security's test to get all of your benefits.

You can earn up to $9,360 in 1990 and still be considered fully redired. But nothing you earn in or after the month you turn 70 will count against the limit. So if you don't earn over $9,360 before that month you can receive all of your checks for the year, January through December.

Photocopies are not accept able. But your documents will be returned to you.

You'll also be asked for infor-mation about your bank, savings, and loan or credit union so your Social Security benefits can be deposited directly into your account.
